A college campus is a place of constant change, Each year brings a succession of new names and new faces -- and older names and older faces depart. Freshmen become sophomores, sophomores become juniors, and so it goes. As the years pass, even the old campus itself changes -- we build and rebuild. And many of you, in years to come, will voice the old plaint, "Now when I was here . . ."

But in one sense, Lincoln College will always be the same for you. As you thumb through the pages of the Lynxite at some future date, you will recall Lincoln College as it was when "you were there," Familiar names, well-known faces will re-appear, bringing with them memories of that era in our lives known as "college days." We hope this yearbook will provide you with many of these pleasant moments.

I wish you, the departing sophomores, the very best of everything and I cordially invite you to visit the campus often. We'll be glad to see you. My one regret is that because of other activities and because of the increased student body I have not been able to get to know each of you as in former years.

Sincerely,

RAYMOND DOOLEY
